

JECO eNews for July 2012

The saddest day on the Jewish calendar is Tisha B'Av (July 28, 2012) when we as a community mourn the destruction of the first and second Temples in Jerusalem.

The following paragraph is from an article by Richard H. Schwartz entitled "RELATING TISHA B'AV TO TODAY'S ENVIRONMENTAL CRISES".

"In view of the many threats to humanity today, it is important that Jews enhance their commemoration of the spiritually meaningful holiday of Tisha B'Av by making it a time to begin striving even harder to live up to Judaism's highest moral values and teachings. On this solemn occasion, we should learn from our history and heed a basic lesson of the holiday -- that failure to respond to proper admonitions can lead to catastrophe. The Jewish people must make tikkun olam (the repair and healing of the planet) a major focus in Jewish life today, and consider personal and societal changes that will reduce environmental threats. By doing this, we would be performing a great kiddush Hashem (sanctification of God's Name) by helping move our imperiled planet to a sustainable path, and by showing that Judaism's eternal values have relevance to today's critical issues."

Solar technology developed by Professor Jacob Karni of the Weizmann Institute is used to reduce greenhouse gases when brown coal is burned. Using this technology CO<sub>2</sub> is dismantled to carbon monoxide and oxygen. At the same time water is separated into hydrogen and oxygen. Carbon monoxide and hydrogen can then be mixed to make Syngas, which can be used as gaseous fuel, <http://www.greenprophet.com/2012/06/karnin-solar-energy-brown-coal/>
